History

Born in Albania, Eugert Kaziu was just like any other kid happy and healthy. At the age of 6 he started showing slight signs of deformity in his feet, which became more and more problematic as he grew up.

After going from one doctor's office to another, we realized that no doctor in Albania was able to perform a successful surgery. Today, at the age of 13, Eugert can no longer walk without going through tremendous pain, he can not join his friends for a play outside and he is transported back and forth from school in a car. Eugert did nothing wrong in his life and was awarded half a decade of pain and suffering.

Fortunately for him and thanks to Dr. Kenneth M.

Leavitt at New England Baptist Hospital, he has a second chance at a normal life and I really hope that you will help us make this happen.
